

Insane Condition

Trigger. When your current Madness equals or exceeds your Max Sanity, you gain the Insane condition.

Ending the Condition. The Insane condition ends immediately when your current Madness is reduced below your Max Sanity.

Madness Die. While Insane, you have a Madness Die. The Madness Die is an 8-sided die with three Blank faces, three Star faces, and two Eye faces.

Unstable Violence. Once per turn, when you take the Attack action or perform a harmful Rite, choose your target or area as normal. Before resolving the attack or Rite, roll the Madness Die.

Star. Resolve the attack or Rite normally.

Blank. The attack or Rite turns against your nearest ally instead. If more than one ally is equally near, you choose which one is targeted. If no ally is within range, you must spend available movement to bring an ally within range or reach, if possible. If no ally can be targeted after this movement, the attack or Rite turns inward and targets you instead.

Eye. For one moment, you understand what you are about to do. You may either end your turn immediately with no effect, or roll the Madness Die again. If the second roll is another Eye, the vision breaks you: roll your Sanity Die, suffer that much Mind damage, and gain 1 Madness.

Cracked Perception. While Insane, you have Advantage on Wisdom (Perception) checks and Intelligence (Eldritch Knowledge) checks made to notice unnatural things, hidden entities, dream-architecture, impossible movement, or occult distortions.
